

IDEA 31 A Pedagogy of Recognition: Meeting the need of urban children and youth for positive recognition while helping teachers reconstruct and redefine the purpose of education for their students

Society knows that children and youth will get the attention of adults—one way or the other. However, when schools and society provide positive recognition, these young people are not left with only anti-social behavior and attitudes to get the attention they feel they deserve.

IDEA 31 will “problematize” the concept of recognition, particularly for urban youth, and introduce a new urban education around pedagogy which will help schools to understand, examine, and “rectify” the social, political, and economic conditions that plague marginalized communities of low-income urban youth.
