

IDEA 56 Student voice or student action in Indianapolis?

Recent programs developed in Australia provide reasons to expand traditional definitions of service learning and the role of students in school governance. This raises these questions:

- Do traditional methods and rationale for shared decision-making and community service actually limit the good these activities can do while also giving students the wrong sense of responsibility and helping?
- Can moving from student voice to student action inside schools and enabling students to shape their community outside of school create better education and better societies?
