

her.

Challenge to All.

"The war revealed an amount of illiteracy far in excess of what was believed to exist. Treason, sedition and lack of real allegiance are all too common. The spread of extreme, socialistic and anarchistic doctrines is alarming. The problems of the present are surely big enough to challenge all your powers.

"From your vantage point of knowledge and idealism you have unusual opportunity to do the republic a great service, by forming correct public opinion and making the right sort of new American. The future of the country is secure if the right sort of citizen becomes common. College men and women should unite in making the new American, the citizen of tomorrow, who shall have at least these qualities:

"1. He should have the education that will acquaint him with the history and ideals of his country. That education should train him to think straight. It should result not only in the accumulation of knowledge, but in that finer thing, the transformation of knowledge into wisdom.

"2. He should be open-minded; that is, he should be a continual learner, ready to change with changed conditions. He should be neither radical nor conservative. He should be enough of the former to advance with courage, and enough of the latter to look backward for guidance.

"3. He should know the language of this republic so that he can read it, write it, and think in it. This is necessary if the principles of our government are to be understood and if we are to have homogeneity among our people.

"4. He should be obedient to law. The main characteristic of Anglo-Saxon supremacy everywhere is found in the attitude toward law. Order and justice are essential to freedom. Liberty under law is the foundation of free government.

"5. He should be loyal to democracy. Free government can not permanently endure unless those who are responsible for it have a greater loyalty to democracy itself than they have to party or class.

Butler President Dr. Roberty Judson Aley validates Anglo-Saxon supremacy during commencement speech

Butler College President Dr. Aley notes that one's "attitude toward the law" is the main characteristic of white supremacy "everywhere" as the 4th of 7 qualities of what he calls "the new American, the citizen of tomorrow" during his June 12, 1922 graduation ceremony address. The speech is part of a Star story on the $200,000 acquisition of Fairview Park as the future home of Butler College: June 13, 1922, p, 15, col. 4.

Clipped By:

johnharrisloflin
Mon, Oct 5, 2020